EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES:

While at Florida State University I have taught introductory physics classes for scientists and engineers, for premed students and for students in art and film, along with mathematical physics and computational physics courses. I helped develop a graduate course in Educational Technology for Elementary and Middle School Teachers and am currently teaching in the areas of Information Architecture and Project Management for Information Technology. I have won a University Teaching Award and two State of Florida Teaching Incentive Program Awards. As director of the FSU Office for Distributed and Distance Learning I assisted FSU and a variety of FSU academic departments in developing online degree programs, and applying technology to instruction. As Dean of the College of Information I directed the creation and initiation of FSU's Information Technology Major. Since becoming Dean of the College of Communication and Information I have overseen the development of the new Information, Communication and Technology major. and assisted with the development and management plans for online courses and programs in Project Management, Communication, Hispanic Marketing Communication, a bridge program in Communication Science and Disorders, a market-based programs in Library and Information Studies, Communication Science and Disorders and Project Management
